

October 5, 1966

➤ Mr. Don Anderson, Publisher
Wisconsin State Journal
Madison, Wisconsin 53701

Dear Mr. Anderson:

The weekly column that I had in mind is written by Joshua Lederberg, who used to be on the University faculty, but is now at Stanford. I thought it might be of interest to people (other than me) because of his former Madison connection, his status as a Nobel Prize winner, and because of his wide erudition. I found the columns both interesting and informative. It would go well in your Sunday edition.

In any case, here are some of the columns. I don't know whether this is a complete list or not; it may be. I would like them back sometime, but there is no hurry.

Let me repeat what I said on the phone yesterday about the New York Times news service. The stories are so much fuller and deeper than most of the other wire services that your news coverage is much better than it was -- to say nothing of having Reston and the other columnists.

Sincerely,

James F. Crow

JFC/as